Writing in Kindergarten

Mrs. Flynn

We hope you enjoy reading these heartfelt love letters from my kindergartners to their mothers. Leave it to the children to remind us that it is the little things that mean so much! An important skill for kindergartners is to plan what they would like to communicate in their writing before they write it. We do this by discussing the topic then drawing some pictures and writing a few key words to the best of our ability in response to some questions that I pose. Then, I interview each child individually and type the answers to the questions in a letter format. Finally, they read it to make sure it says everything they want it to say.
